

Some or Any?

We use some in affirmative sentences... ... and (not) any in negative ones.

Keep
nurturing
some
dreams,
folks...

You don't need any
dreams: just cling to reality.

Would you like
some life tips?
Well, stay
foolish and stay hungry.

In interrogative sentences, we use ANY when we are questioning the existence of a quantity. By contrast, we use SOME when we know that a given quantity of something exists, but we are asking whether the listener likes it, would like it, etc.

Do I have any life tips
for you? No, I don't. You learn life by living it.
