Quote #24

Andy Warhol

“They always say time changes things, but you actually have to change them yourself.”

Andy Warhol (1928-1987) was a New York-based artist best known for founding the visual art movement called Pop art. The underlying assumption to this movement was that art is not an ivory tower meant for experts and connoisseurs, but a cultural constellation spanning a variety of areas, including celebrity culture and advertising. Some of his most famous works include the silkscreen paintings Campbell's Soup Cans (1962) and the Marilyn Diptych (1962). His studio, The Factory, became a gathering place for such varied individuals as intellectuals, drag queens, playwrights, Bohemian street people, Hollywood celebrities, and wealthy patrons. He is also credited with coining the widely used expression "15 minutes of fame".
